FROM ATLANTA.

THE COTTON EXPOSITION.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier:

The International Cotton Exposition has advanced to a new stage in its progress. According to previous announcement, the time for receiving applications for space expired last Saturday. During this week the Department of Allotment will complete its labors and every exhibitor will be notified what space he can occupy. Nearly all of the Main Building is now ready for exhibits and the others are in a good state of forwardness. There was at one time some fear on the part of exhibitors that the buildings would not be ready for them. Now the situation is reversed and the Executive Department is beginning to wonder whether the exhibitors will be ready on time. Whatever may be the case with individuals and firms, the railroad companies will be on hand with their collective displays and have them in first-class order on opening day. Hundreds of tons of freight have arrived, or are within one or two days' travel of this city, representing the railway exhibits, and their experts are all ready to commence putting them in place.

Late on Saturday night it was found after careful computation, that eighty-five thousand square feet were needed beyond the capacity of the buildings already erected to meet the requirements of exhibitors, and it was promptly determined to build Annexes enough to meet this extraordinary demand. The result of this will be a continuous series of buildings on the terrace overlooking the plain where the Main Building and Department of Comfort stand.

Among the extraordinary features of the display by miscellaneous manufacturers is the great number and variety of steam engines. These are of all sizes and kinds and will impress visitors with the extraordinary impetus that this branch of American industry has received in the last few years. The display of farming implements and machinery will also be very imposing, and in this department the Centennial Exhibition will be completely outdone. A noticeable thing about these and nearly all other exhibits by manufacturers is that there has been little attempt at flashy decorations. There is nothing in these lines entered for exhibition that could not at once be applied to the uses for which it was designed. Silver plated plows and gold mounted harrows are not to be found this time, every manufacturer preferring to rely on the intrinsic practical excellence of his goods, rather than on fictitious adornment. This absence of decoration is doubtless due in part to the fact that manufacturers have been too busy with orders to spare men for decorative work, but this lack of adornment, instead of marring, adds materially to the excellence of the exhibit. It shows just what American manufacturers are doing to satisfy the wants of their customers, and it furnishes a much better criterion for the Judges to go by than would more highly finished goods. It is far better, also, for the information of the masses, who will see at the Exposition nothing but what will be furnished them from the manufacturers' agents if they wish to purchase.

The Exposition authorities are greatly pleased at the success of negotiations that have been some time in progress for securing additional accommodations for the crowds of visitors who are expected here next month. It has long been evident that additional facilities were needed for lodging and feeding the throngs. Where these were to come from was a difficult question to answer. President Morehead, of the National Planters' Association, wrote to the Director General some two months since, urging him to make arrangements for an encampment near the Exposition Grounds. The Director General was pleased with the thought and at once endeavored to carry it into effect. After long and patient effort, he succeeded in persuading several Northern parties to put their capital into this enterprise and, in consequence of this, there will be, on a beautiful wooded slope, overlooking the Park, two large and admirably conducted encampments, one for families, the other for men only. In the first there will be a considerable number of wall tents arranged by streets and enclosed by a high and strong fence. In the centre will be a large, wooden dining hall, with commodious cook house attached. The table and chamber furniture will be of the best, a first-class caterer and a French cook will be employed, and all things will be managed by a landlord of tried experience, who, during the last summer has delighted multitudes of guests at the Encampment Hotel, in the Warwick Woodlands of Orange County, New York. If he can conclude satisfactory arrangements with one of the Electric Light Companies, he proposes to have his encampment illuminated every night with one or two powerful electric burners. In all the streets of this enclosure there will be substantial plank sidewalks and the tents will be nicely floored and otherwise protected against any stress of weather. The catering and cooking in the encampment for men will also be first-class, but there will be no attempt at style in the furnishing of the tents, but every man there will be made comfortable and entertained at a very moderate cost. It is probable that there will be a number of smaller camps in the same vicinity, each established by some one of the large manufacturing firms that will have constantly at the Exposition a score or more of employees. The Director General has also been asked to provide a suitable place in that neighborhood for parties of visitors who expect to bring with them their own camp equipage and spend two or three weeks at the Exposition. It would surprise no one familiar with the facts if, during the fine weather of October and November, there should be times when from eight to ten thousand persons would be living under canvas in the immediate vicinity of Oglethorpe Park.

THE DEATH OF THE PRESIDENT

PRESS GIVES VOICE TO THE UNIVERSAL SORROW

[From the Portland Daily Press.]

President Garfield is dead. The awful tension is ended. For weeks his spirit has been hovering on the confines of eternity and the Nation's heart has been sobbing in sympathy and the Nation's ear has been strained to catch the tidings from the sick room. All is over. The resolute will, the robust physique, the dauntless courage, have succumbed before the pallid hosts of Death. The country is in tears this morning, and all hearts are in the darkened chamber at Long Branch where the tortured ruler lies at rest.

Garfield died like a brave man. His name will occupy one of the highest places in the American Pantheon. Beside him in the hearts of the lovers of manhood will be written the names of WASHINGTON and LINCOLN, and WILLIAM the Silent and TOUSSAINT L'OUVERTURE, and GARFIELD. His martyrdom is apotheosis.

[From the Lewiston Journal.]

For eleven weeks and three days of suffering the iron constitution has successfully battled, and darkness bulletin after bulletin has come. Garfield is dead, and the world is trembling on all its hills. Human wishes and the prayers of mankind were unavailing to restore him, and just before the clock struck eleven at Francklyn cottage on Monday night President Garfield peacefully crossed the seas whose yonder shores know no more storm of pain or dying.

Not in all our national history has a tragedy and so sad an experience been on the nation—one in which the universal better and spiritual nature was so deeply aroused, one in which partisanship and seeking were so utterly abashed and ended.

[From the Portland Press.]

Words vain to make historic mention of one who has gone. His life is known by all his fellow countrymen, the labors and results of his early years, his studious and manly youth, his courageous, laborious and devoted manhood, the work and the triumphs of his great career, and the crowning spectacle of patience and fortitude in protracted suffering, all these are household words in every American home. A good, pure and patriotic life furnishes a model for those who are to come after. He has died untimely and with his good work undone, but he has not lived and died in vain. The world is better for his presence in it and the beneficient influence will last far into the future.

[From the Portland Argus.]

The drooping flag, the festooned drapery and other outward semblances of woe but feebly express the intense grief that will prevail when the sad news of the President's death shall have become known. The country will receive a terrible shock, but little mitigated by the fact that to many the result was not entirely unexpected. The public mind has been familiarized with the fallacious hope of his recovery and it was only within the last few days that the people were brought to look upon the President as past all hope of living.

[From the Bangor Commercial.]

The long struggle of President Garfield for life has ended, the sufferer passed away peacefully and with but little pain at 10 o'clock last night. The tolling of bells at midnight last night told the painful story to the people of this city, who had been prepared by the telegraphic news of the day to expect the sad announcement at any time.

For eleven long, weeks the battle of skill and fortitude against a robust constitution and strong vitality to overcome the effects of the assassin's bullet has been watched with painful solicitude and alternate hope and fear by millions of people, not only in our own land but in other countries whose sympathies for the recovery of the President the great republic were uttered in language strange to our ears.

[From the Boston Journal.]

When the news of the firing of the fatal shot was flashed over the country, it began to be seen how well the people loved him and how powerless were all past animosities and political divisions to silence the tributes to his character or dull the sympathy with his suffering. Day by day, hour by hour, this feeling has grown more tender and with an anxiety and a stress of emotion indescribable except to those who have shared in them the whole nation has watched by the bedside of the President, feeling every change of symptom and prayer to catch at any ray of hope. The end was cherished and for a time, as it seemed with good reason that the President might be spared to recover from his wound and to enjoy the trust and love of a people which no one knew better than how to appreciate and no one was more likely than he to prove himself fully worthy of. Providence has decreed otherwise and the good, brave, true-hearted President has gone from us. Dying as a man and a Christ an should die, he leaves a legacy of a noble example, and a rich and honorable memory.

[From the Boston Advertiser.]

General Garfield was not in all points equally strong, nor a man of invariable wisdom. He made mistakes of judgment and of conduct. Men pardoned his mistakes because they believed he never intended a wrong act. His conspicuous honesty of aim and of motive was a sufficient shield against whatever assaults envy or malignity contrived for his injury. No man was ever more monstrously misrepresented and assailed, and no man ever came forth from the trial more successful.

His life is a lesson to politicians which would be well for them if they could appreciate and in all its significance. Reviewing this sad hour his marvelous career from cradle of obscurity and want to that bed of suffering into which poured anxious condolences of high and poor, and of the wise and good in every nation where virtue and liberty are honored words, the thought which will no sooner for later to all, and when it comes will abide, is, that after all character is the main thing, the most precious possession, the surest power, the noblest legacy, the most enduring fame.

[From the Boston Post.]

The President of the United States dead, is the nation's President, and no class nor party nor section nor creed, unless it counts the execution of all good men will or can withhold its grief and sympathy. He will be laid in the grave with sorrow unfelgned, because in these eleven weeks the American people have learned that the bullet which pierced his vitals meant more than death to an individual.

[From the Boston Herald.]

But all those reflections are of no avail. President Garfield's work is done. For good or ill, the record is finished. He has left a name and a fame which the nation will cherish among those of her most honored sons. 'James is a good man,' said the aged mother of the President, with simple dignity and just pride. The American people believe that he was a good man; a devoted lover of his country and a just ruler. It is said—it will always remain said—that he should be so cut down in the prime of his splendid manhood, with all his honors thick upon him. But, if we believe in a God who over rules all events for the good of the race—which is his own glory—or only have faith in some power in the universe, not ourselves which makes for right, it is impossible to doubt or to despair. James A. Garfield was a man of faith, and his own strong words of sixteen years ago, when Lincoln lay dead at the capital, as he now lies, cannot too often be recalled at this sad juncture. "God still reigns, and the Government lives."

We deeply grief I and my children learn with but not unexpected news of the utter extinction of the soft rings of the President His loss is a great misfortune I have learned with great sorrow that the President has passed away.

The Prince of Wales telegraphs to Lowell The Princess and myself beg you to offer our sincere condolence to Mrs Garfield

Earl Granville, Secretary of Foreign Affairs telegraphed Lowell We are deeply grieved He has sent a cable message to Washington direct, requesting the Secretary of State to assure Mrs Garfield and the Government of the grief with which the English Government has received the announcement

The Mother of the Late President.

CLEVELAND, Sept 20 The Herald's special from Solon says The news was broken to 'Grandma' Garfield about nine o'clock this morning At first she was very much shocked, but soon came to and talked calmly She said "It was probably for the best if people were ready to receive it Then said "It is not possible that my son James is dead, I do not wish to live any longer, I will soon be with him

The Inquest and Autopsy

LONG BRANCH, Sept 20 Coroner Britton has been in earnest consultation with Dr Bliss, the Attorney Leaming, of Monmouth County, United States District Attorney Keasbey of New Jersey, and members of the Cabinet nearly all day Leaming says it is generally believed there is no necessity of holding an inquest and has not yet decided whether it would be held or not At this time, 11 P M everything is quiet the Cabinet officers are still at Mr MacVeagh's cottage Dr Hamlin of Washington, and not Dr Curtis as previously stated will have charge of the autopsy

Dr Bliss says that it will take about an hour and a half and that a report will be given for the use of the press as soon as it can be prepared District Attorney Lanning said this afternoon there is no doubt but that the State of New Jersey has a right to try Guiteau for the murder of President Garfield but he is now a United States prisoner, if the U S authorities demand the right to try Guiteau on the latter holding him at Washington to await his trial the New Jersey State authorities will not ask to have him sent here We have not come to any conclusion in the matter U S Attorney Keasby is now with the Cabinet and the Coroner and I will see him before we can tell what we will do

Scenes Around the Jail

WASHINGTON, Sept 20 District Attorney Corkhill referring to the report of the intended attack on the jail, said to-day

It is nonsensical and exaggerated I could take 1000 men one week to accomplish Guiteau's removal The necessary round the jail indicate that an onslaught would not be surprising before to-morrow No additional guards have been ordered and but three guards from the battery are on duty this morning they have been stationed at a more distant point, leading toward the railway, by which the approach to the jail is made so that in case of a demonstration, other military aid can be immediately brought.

Motley gatherings are noticed at different points, at a short distance from the jail, talking in subdued tones, and all along the roadway leading from the city to the jail small groups of persons are noticed approaching the jail The guards do not anticipate any demonstration before night It is probable that additional troops will be ordered out this evening, as it is supposed secret organizations for the purpose of lynching Guiteau, will arrive by the incoming trains this evening Warden Crooker manifested considerable alarm at seeing the gathering of men on the hill side

Guiteau and the Warden.

The warden left to visit Guiteau's cell and after an absence of about 10 minutes said When I entered the cell, after the usual morning greeting, Guiteau asked "How is the President?" and I replied, 'I did not know." I answered him thus in order to find out if he had gained knowledge of his death

Guiteau replied "You ought to know, have you not read the morning papers?" I said I had but could not rely on the various statements in the papers He then said he had felt very anxious about the President for the past few days and feared he was nearing his end

I then informed him, watching his expression carefully, that the President was dead He instantly sank down on the bed and appeared very much agitated After remaining in this position a few moments he arose and paced the floor, muttering something as if praying. He then inquired at what time he had died, and I believing he suffered great pain, and during the entire period exhibited extraordinary patience, fortitude and Christian resignation. The sorrow throughout the country is deep and universal.

Fifty millions of people stand as mourners by his bier To-day at his residence in the City of New York, Chester A. Arthur, Vice-President, took the oath of office as President, to which he accedes by virtue of the Constitution.

President Arthur has entered upon the discharge of his duties. You will formally communicate these facts to the British Government and transmit this despatch by telegraph to the American Ministers on the Continent, for like communication to the Governments to which they are respectively accredited.

(Signed) JAMES G BLAINE, Secretary.

The Special Train

LONG BRANCH, Sept 20. Attorney General MacVeagh says it has been definitely decided that the train bearing the remains of the late President will leave here at ten o'clock to-morrow morning. It will go through to Washington without stop except at water stations. The officials of several cities, including Philadelphia and Pittsburg, have requested that the body lie in state in their cities, but in accordance with Mrs Garfield's wish there will be no delay in taking the remains to the place of burial as quickly as possible The Governor of New Jersey and staff are now here and will escort the remains from Francklyn Cottage to Elberon station President Arthur, Gen Grant and wife and Chief Justice and Mrs. Waite will accompany the remains as far as Washington

Expression of the Press.

NEW YORK, Sept 19 The Tribune says The reaper, Death, gathers the bravest and best After a struggle which has kindled the admiration of the world for its heroic manhood, President Garfield is gone From the still heights where crime and pain come not, he looks down upon the mourning Nation, which he hoped to help by the wise discharge of duty Worthier men than Abraham Lincoln and James A Garfield, this country never has seen in its high station, and each was struck early in his term of power and in the prime of manhood The President's death will cause less shock, but far more sorrow, than if he had been shot dead on the second of July There has been time to learn that the Government cannot be shaken by the death of any man however high, or great, or good but it never has also been time to learn how great and good a man was stricken in the exercise of the vast powers of the Presidency by the voice of the people in November He is President no more Only four months he held office, but the work done in that short time will bless the land for ages

The Times says The long suspense is over A calmer more watchful and prayerful people is seldom known in history has mourned the death of the President of the United States It is safe to say that no people of a public mind has ever depicted this life amid sorrow so profound and universal as that which attended the passing away of James A Garfield It may be confidently asserted that among the millions who in his slow progress to the tomb, file to this people, it is the present duty to establish government to command respect abroad, while old party passions subside to the lowest terms of ordinary nature and possess only the power to stimulate the lowest impulses of one's nature and profession and to command the parent of the next revenge The bullet of Guiteau has not reached The bullet of the dead President will not believe and true, nourish such hatred and sorrow for the cause of which a seedling grew to the potency of his death may prove in the providence of God to be greater than the weight which should have attended the struggling and best energies of his life

The Herald says The lives of Garfield and of Lincoln will always be linked together in the pathetic record of their doom in tragic fate, but it will also be recorded to their honor as indications of a type of men that is to be contributed to the greatness of our National History by those divisions of our people that grow up in remote districts where they are comparatively unaffected by outside influences To Herbert Spencer the success or of Vice President Arthur, and says his accession to the Presidency cannot lead to any such unfortunate results as in a party sense, as have resulted from previous successions of Vice Presidents, though there has been in full sympathy between the political section of the Republican leaders, there has never been a doubt whatever that Mr Arthur was in full accord with all recognized principles of the National policy of his party.

The World says No man better equipped by study and experience in public affairs for the special work of the Presidency looking into account the conditions under which he came to it has been chosen to that great office by the country since John Quincy Adams What can we better say of a death after such a life full of honors, be not yet of years, the more pathetic solemn and memorable words of Burke?—"The melancholy event of yesterday reads to us an awful lesson against too much trouble about any of the objects of ordinary ambition

The Sun says In his death warm hopes and sympathizing aspirations of the whole people are painfully disappointed While we do not rebel at the advent of a new administration, every American will feel himself bereaved by Gen Garfield's death Fairly elected to the Presidency, Lowly inducted in the office charged with great duty, he entered upon his functions with the vigor

The Surgeon's Knife.

Wonderful Surgical Operation—Removal of Urinary Stones from the Bladder—Successful.

Mr. Simeon Tietsell, of Saugerties, N. Y., had been treated for seven years by various physicians for what they call Stricture of the Urethra, without benefit. He finally consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who found his trouble to be Urinary Calculi or Stones in the Bladder. The doctor at once removed the foreign bodies with the knife, and then gave his great Blood Specific, "Favorite Remedy," to prevent their re-formation. The entire treatment was eminently successful, and Mr. Tietsell's recovery was rapid and perfect.

While "Favorite Remedy" is a specific in all Kidney and Bladder diseases, it is equally valuable in cases of Bilious Disorders, Constipation of the Bowels, and all the class of ills apparently inseparable from the constitutions of women. Try it. Your druggist has it, and its cost is only one dollar a bottle. The lucky man is he who puts this advice in practice. Don't forget the name and address, Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. The Doctor would have it understood that, while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession, but confines himself exclusively to office practice. He treats all diseases of a chronic character, and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

EDMUND BURKE, late Commissioner of Patents."

BOSTON, October 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, ESQ.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1840, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, reissues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business in your line, and advise others to employ you. J. W. KITTREDGE, Agent Elixir of Life Root;

Dear Sir—Having suffered intensely for four years with disease of the Kidneys, after having during that time tried various medicines without obtaining relief, I was induced to try a bottle of your ELIXIR OF LIFE ROOT, and it affords me pleasure to say that one bottle of it completely cured me. I recommend it as the only valuable and certain cure for kidney troubles I have ever seen. I would add that before taking your medicine I had become so weak that I was about to give up work. Hoping that others who have suffered like myself may be so fortunate as to try your valuable medicine,
